

Bermuda Pattern Lamp

Lamp, magazine, Bermuda pattern To burn candles; to light in three directions.

The BERMUDA pattern lantern is similar to the Lamp. magazine, partition, but has glass on three sides instead of two. English Heritage have already fabricated similar lanterns and examples of them can be seen in the basement magazine of Hurst Castle, although they are not the type most suited to the position they occupy.

The List of Changes for 1888 explains the origin of the name and describes the Bermuda pattern lantern thus :-

5617 - Lamp, magazine, Bermuda Pattern

10th. November 1888 to burn candles to light in three directions.

A pattern of this lamp has been sealed to govern special supplies for Bermuda.

It is similar to the magazine lamp (§2573, §3857), except that the front has been glazed, in addition to the sides, to light in three directions, and the smoke cap has been made an inch higher.

The list of changes for 16th. June 1896 details alterations to the Bermuda Pattern lamp thus :-

8426 Lamps. magazine, Bermuda Pattern (Mark III) to burn candles; to light in three directions

Patterns of the above-mentioned magazine lamps have been sealed to govern future manufacture and alteration of existing store. They differ from the previous pattern in §7252, in the following particulars.

The brass movable candle sockets have been replaced by tin open sockets, supported in the different lamps as follows :-

In the Bermuda, partition and wall lamp, the socket is fixed to a movable tray, which fits into the bottom of the lamp.

n